This game is amazing...

Low Price

Great Game. If you like Bejeweled this game is for you. It is cute and easy to learn with new challenges every step of the way. At the same time you get to build a small town/village and unlock minigames. Building the wonders is more complicated than I thought during my first Wonder. It is not just click on anything and be done with it. One achievement was to complete a Wonder in seven levels. This could only be achieved with some consideration as to where I would put my resources. Adding one piece of the Wonder unlocks other positions. Figuring out which will be unlocked is crucial to be aware of to not waste a round by still having resources on hand. If it had been more advanced with this I would have enjoyed the game a whole lot more! It felt like a small tease. If the developers had built the game around the resources and the building of Wonders, making a demand for the player to be considerate about the placements, this game would have been so much better.

Even so I recommend it for all my fellow Bejeweled-players out there. 7 Wonders is a nice variant of the classic game and should be played.. My review has been changed from negative to positive because of improvements made to the game and most importantly a price drop from $25 to $15. I am leaving the rest of the review as it was.

Journey of Life does a lot of things differently then most survival games. The main reason is its far more realistic. You start with 4 inventory slots, so making that backpack early on is key. You can't carry XX number of logs and stones, like most survival games let you do. Is that good or bad? Well I think that might depend on your preferences, I found I really liked it. Sure it can be a pain to gather resources to make the simplest items, but I felt like I accomplished something big even when it was really only a small item like a backpack or fireplace. So the question is how much do you value realism? I don't think anyone can carry more then a couple sticks or stones at a time in real life without the assistance of a backpack. So that is what Journey of Life goes for, and it does it well.

So why the negative review you ask..well I can't leave a neutral review that is why. I really like what they've got working in the game and many of the mechanics have potential, but it's still got a long way to go and the $25 price tag is too much of a risk for hoping they finish the game. Its only a 2 man crew and even though they have been quick to fix bugs and get patches out so far, I feel like this game has a few years of work left to go. As many of us know life can easily get in the way of that. I wish the price tag was $10 I would recommend taking a chance on it for that price.

Here is my first look video if you'd like to see it in action.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9qzJwbRFzeU&feature=youtu.be>. This is a nice game I want to give it a chance. At least the devs are on the right foot with the basics and mechanics of the game... Needs some work.(Actually a lot of work.)

*Playing with someone would be much better.

*The game is very confusing for a newcomer such as me.

*The menu... Not there yet but it will hopefully join us sometime.

*The mechanics are unique but perhaps it would be more intriguing to add some more skills,traits,abilities etc.

*A lot of animations need to be finished.

*Sound bugs? Or maybe bad sound quality? Or its just a problem with my audio card I don't really know.

Yes,yes I know people who will read this throughly would think like;

" Why does this guy even recommend this game?"

Well friend, this game is unique thats all. I played some decent amount of Natural Selection but this one is just completely different and when I saw that "Inspired by The Thing" I instantly bought the game without watching a trailer or anything. Suprisingly the game looks good. But as I said needs a lot of work.

I would give it a 5.4/10. My review and score will definitely change in the future updates.

Feel free to add and play with me.. What is "Friends"? . Lookout ladies!

Point Perfect has improved my mackin game 100%

Your noodle wrist is in for an awakening.

Best find of Steam Summer Sale 2017.. For anyone curious to know what the PC changes are compared to the Android V IOS version...

PC Version:

- Removed the stamina system
- Removed training time, now you can stat up instantly in training mode, as long as you have the gold.
- Removed all in-app purchases
- Shops had their gacha system removed from the game
- Reworked diamond rewards from quests, completing entire area now grants 5 star guardians instead of gems.
- Does not require an online connection, however, your "friends" tab while exploring will be randomly generated.
- No more boss modes. (You can farm guardian shards from normal levels through the treasure system)

For what it's worth, it's a fun RPG puzzle game. After going through a quick tutorial, you can customize your character's name and appearance. You can not make multiple characters, however. Gameplay is a match 3 game, fairly simple if you're familiar with puzzles and dragons. You are given a fair amount of time to create matches. And...

Matching...

- 3+ sword icons causes your character to attack
- 3+ paw icons causes your current active guardian to attack (and fill a bit of it's special attack gauge)
- 3+ star icons fills up your own character's special attack gauge
- 3+ heart icons restore a portion of your HP
- 3+ gold icons rewards you with a bit more gold at stage completion.

Sounds simple enough, though to gain chests in battle, there are certain matching conditions you have to fulfill, and some of those corner matches can be a giant pain. If your mouse cursor ever leaves the grid, it will consider it as releasing your hold and end the turn. This can be troublesome later on when the matching conditions get tremendously tough.

All in all, a fun puzzle game, is it worth it's current price though? Your mileage may vary.. Be prepared to break every bone in your body, including your controller!. I may be wrong but I find the Gold skin too overrated. I bought this for Tiger and Zebra skins. They look sick.

Such a beautiful and serene game! Can really recommend this if you like to go around and carefully take in your surroundings while solving hard, but not too hard, puzzles. All while unraveling a mysterious story.

VR support when devs?! :). This game is different but I loved it!. Old game but still good, RPG with RTS with some base building in some stages. Rolls around your main character that you level up and get skill upgrades. Different to most games out there.. GLADOS!

ARGHAGHGRGASGDHGASHDGASHDG~!

^If this review has not made you want to buy this game, you need to be tested.. I absolutely love this unit!. I knew about this game for a long time due to it's "free version" (which is now considered a demo) on Itch.io, but never knew it had grown into something bigger.

The game is a "walking simulator", but it's more engaging than most, and short enough to finish within an evening.

The story is where I fall apart, something about 4D timelines\possibilities, some guardians called Lily and Andrew, a shadow boy? I don't understand it, but honestly I'm pretty dumb, so I'll give the story a pass and blame it on my own retardation.

the visuals... I love them, all the human characters have this low-poly look, while the monster versions of Anita are more properly rendered and Lily and Andrew have this gross, wet look about them.

I really enjoy the game, and hope to see a continuation of some kind at some point, because my only huge gripe with the game is that it doesn't wrap up in a satisfying way.. A very interesting concept that it executed in a very skillful way.

This game also has big potential if it keep being updated as there still are a few bugs in the game that i have noticed during my 90+ minutes of playtime.

And there is no push for micro-transactions that i have discovered yet.

This game also ahs a very pleasing art style that is gentle, dark and easy on the eyes.

The on thing i would like to be done better is marking which minions in your army need to get their ability in a match as i often forget what my units need to use their power-ups.

Overall it's a very good game with a few minor bugs. i would reccomend this to a friend.. Josh approves of these warriors.
